Professor Budlong Puts Tanlac To Test

PROF. C. J. BUDLONG, Manchester, N. H.

"It's an actual fact, I'm in good health for the first time in thirty years and I owe my present splendid condition to Tanlac and nothing else," was the emphatic statement of Prof. C. J. Budlong, well-known and highly respected citizen of Manchester, N. H., residing at 42 School street.

"Practically all my life I had had rheumatism, and when I say rheumatism I mean every word of it. It was all over my body and especially bad in my feet and legs and there were times when I couldn't get from my bed to my chair without help. And from the time I was a boy I couldn't sit down and eat a good meal without being in misery afterwards and I would have terrible pains around my heart and frequent attacks of palpitation and dizziness.

"I had a stubborn case of constipation, was troubled awfully with blind- ing headaches and hardly knew what sleep was. My suffering had almost made a complete nervous wreck of me and I was so weak I wasn't worth a nickel as far as work was concerned. I thought my troubles had a life-long grip on me and was about as discouraged as a man ever gets.

"Well, before I had finished my first bottle of Tanlac I realized it was different from anything I ever tried. It suited my case exactly. And now for almost the first time since I can remember I can eat anything I want and digest it. I haven't an ache or a pain and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I just feel good all over and am full of life and energy these days. Everywhere I go I talk Tanlac. It hasn't an equal."—Advertisement.

Mildew Stains.

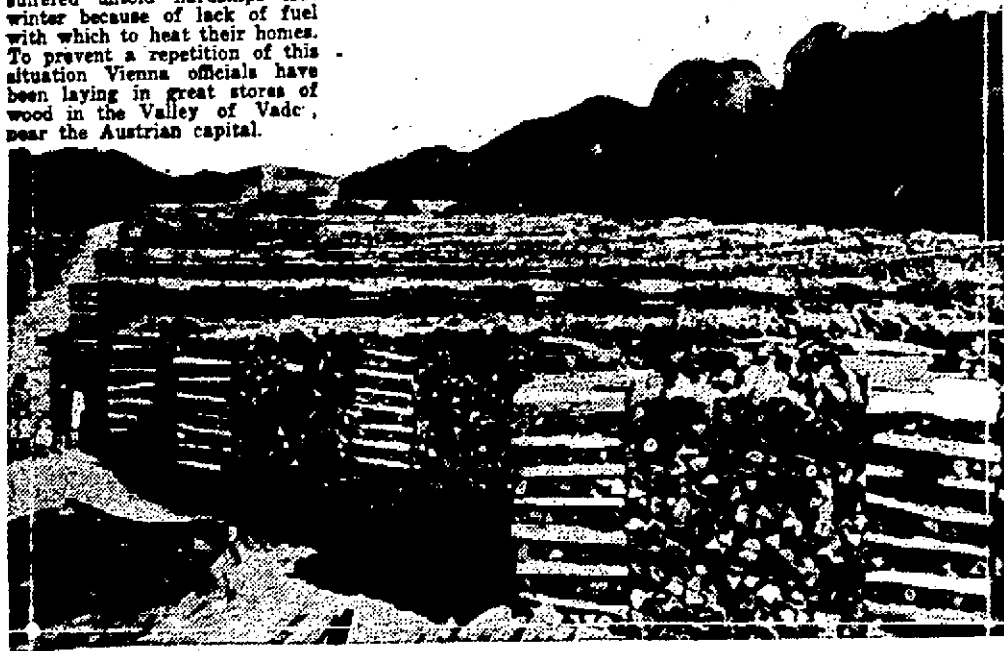

Wet the goods and put soap on the stained parts, then rub salt and lemon juice into the mildew. Afterward apply powdered chalk and expose article to the sun and air for several hours. Another method is to use the powdered chalk alone, rubbing well into the stains, or soaking it in buttermilk and rubbing salt into it, afterward laying the goods on the grass to dry in the sun.

No Tourist Rate for Him.
"Joe is back from California," said the head barber, as he began the lathering of a customer. "He told me a funny story. The day he was leaving Los Angeles he went into a drug store to buy a hair brush. The clerk told him the price was $1.50. 'What's that?' said Joe. 'I'm no tourist; I live here.' 'O, excuse me,' answered the clerk. 'The price is 50 cents.'"

The Smallest Book.

Until recently the smallest book was supposed to be a book made in Italy, which is four-tenths of an inch in width, and the next smallest book, a copy of Dante's "Divine Comedy," is something less than one inch wide. It has, however, recently come to light that Arthur K. Clark of Cleveland, O., made a very small volume, which issued in a limited edition of 57 copies. The volume contains the complete text of the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," with the introduction of several pages by N. H. Dole. It is printed in Japanese vellum paper, is bound in full cloth, and its size is exactly three-eighths of an inch by five-sixteenths of an inch. In this little book the text of the Rubaiyat is so small that it can only be read by the aid of a magnifying glass.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

GIRLS! LEMONS!

BLEACH SKIN WHITE

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rose-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate—advertisement.

to the gallows to hang by the neck until dead. Now, come all you good people and let's put all these promoters where they are trying to put my darling boys and yours. MISS A. M. C.

That is something else to worry about. I'll pass it on to someone else. It's too deep for me.

Dear Dolly—As I sure am in need of your valuable assistance, I would be pleased very much if you would inform me on the following at once: I am a man 40 years of age and have never been in any town larger than Otway, have never seen a locomotive but one time. Now it falls to my lot to have to go to Portsmouth and as I am going to put up at the Washington please give me a few pointers on what I am expected to do. Let me know the initiative step on entering this hotel. What am I to do and say. I am real sorry to humiliate myself by making such a confession but it is true and I want to learn how to do and how to act when I go to this hotel. I have always been a tie maker. I expect I have made more ties and split more free rails than any other man in Peach Mountain. Please give me all the information you can.

WORRIED MAN.

P. S.—What is the price asked for The Portsmouth Daily Times?

When you go into the hotel, go to the clerk at the desk and tell him you want a room for a certain length of time. He will ask you to register in a large book used at the desk for those who stop there, and will give you a key to the room and have a porter show you there. When you leave, you should leave the key at the desk until your return. There is no need to show any embarrassment. Many have been in the same predicament. For the Daily and Sunday paper $7.50 a year; for the Daily paper only $5.00 per year, or for 6 months $2.00; for three months $1.00 or ten weeks $1.00.

New Boston Reader—The person you ask about is conscientious in her work and it is none of your affair what she does. If she weren't perfectly satisfactory in her line, she would not be retained.

Dear Dolly—How may had odor be eliminated from the refrigerator?

WIFE.

First of all, give the refrigerator a thorough soap and water bath inside, followed by a disinfecting, every once in a while. Keep all food, such as bananas, melons, etc., whose odors may be absorbed, out of the refrigerator. By placing a small piece of charcoal on a plate inside on the bottom, it will remove all bad odors. This insures a sweet and fresh smelling interior.

Dear Miss Wise—How can one overcome bashfulness. I am terrified of being with it.

Bashfulness is the result of self-consciousness. When you are able to forget yourself in your interest for other people you will no longer suffer. Do not stay at home because of your failure. Go places and keep your mind active observing others. By observation you will be able to follow what other people are doing and after a while you will feel perfectly at ease in the society of others.

BELFAST GIVES BRITISH ROYALTY ROUSING WELCOME

King George and Queen Mary, from their royal carriage, acknowledging greetings en route to the Belfast city hall.

King George and Queen Mary of England received a tremendous welcome on the occasion of their recent visit to Belfast. The king made the trip to open the new Irish parliament, established under the home rule act. The route from the ship to the city hall was gallily decorated and heavily guarded to prevent possible outbreaks by the Sinn Fein-ers.

No Soldier Bonus Bill

for the raising of the money. There is one bill providing four different ways by which the service men are to be rewarded—they can have money, homesteads, insurance or vocational training—and there is no way of telling whether the total cost to the government would be a billion and a half dollars or four billion dollars. It might be either figure. There are in Congress at least fifteen different bills proposing how the money shall be raised. These suggestions go all the way from plans to recover money received by the so-called "war profiteers" to the use of the billion dollars of interest owed by foreign governments to the United States on the war debt. Nobody knows exactly how money already spent by so-called "war profiteers" can be recovered and that suggestion hadn't much support except in the radical group in Congress.

As for the interest on the foreign debts, there is no sign of money from that source and the chances are it will be from three to five years before any payments are made.

AH! EPSOM SALTS LIKE LEMONADE

You can now buy real epsom salts without the awful taste and nausea, by asking your druggist for a handy package of "Epsomade Salts" which looks and acts exactly like epsom salts, because it is pure epsom salts combined with fruit derivative salts giving it the taste of sparkling lemonade.

Take a tablespoonful in a glass of cold water whenever you feel bilious, headachy or constipated. "Epsomade Salts" is the much talked of discovery of the American Epsom Association—advertisement.

Many Metamorphoses.
Gervill's "Chinese Tales," printed in 1732, tell of Fum-Hoam, the name of a mandarin who restored Malek-ul-Sulein, king of Georgia, to his throne, and told the king's daughter, Guchen-raz, the story of his strange metamorphoses. First he was Piranah, who murdered the usurper Siamek; then a sea; then a lap-dog; then an Indian maiden named Massouma; then a bee, a cricket, a mouse; then Absenderou, the imam; thereafter the daughter of a rich Indian merchant; the jerdan of Idolos; the greatest beauty of Greece; then a foundling found by a dyer in a box; then Dugme, queen of Persia; then a maiden named Hengru; thereafter he became an ape; then the daughter of a midwife of Tatar; then the only son of the Sultan Agra; an Arabian physician; a wild man called Kolao; a slave; the son of a cad of Erzerum; a dervish; an Indian prince and lastly Fum-Hoam.

Leisure Time.
It would seem that one of the most essential of the lessons of life is this—what to do with leisure time so that it shall always be re-creative; so that it shall always renew a right spirit within you. As a matter of fact, if our work was the work most suited to us, if we expressed ourselves very directly in our work and if we did not have too much of it, if we did not violate the dignity and the beauty of it by doing too much in order to secure larger rewards and a quicker recognition, if it was not so much competitive work and was more co-operative and intensely friendly and exalting, then recreation would only be a different kind of work. And that is what it is at its best; and yet there is a place for quiescence, for passivity, and a most important place.—Edward Teomans.

Colorful Weddings in Saxony.
In Saxony the men wear a special wedding dress that looks like a kimono, well trimmed in front and on the cuffs, a soft collar and bow tie, and on their broad-brimmed hats they have bouquets of living flowers. The brides have long handkerchiefs, and they appear to have borrowed their mother's best tablecloth with which to decorate their waists.

Goddess of Water.
The Virgin de los Remedios is a small wooden image about twelve inches high, evidently carved with a dull penknife. The carving bespeaks the work of the Indian. The statue is revered as the Goddess of Water.

Horse in Egyptian History.

No mention of the horse occurs in ancient history before the close of the Twelfth Egyptian dynasty, and a careful study of the palaces of the Pharaohs has failed to reveal any representation of the horse. It was believed that the horse was introduced among the Egyptians after the invasion of lower Egypt, about 2000 B. C., by the Hyksos, or shepherd kings, who appear to have been a tartar race. It is, however, only after the expedition of these hated Asiatic conquerors, that the horse is found depicted on the Egyptian monuments in military scenes in which horses and war-chariots play a conspicuous part in determining the great changes in the tactics of the Egyptian army. Moreover, the ancient historians, Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus, and Strabo, are unanimous in omitting any mention of the appearance of the horse prior to the epoch of the Hyksos invasion.

Queer Way of Cheating Spirits.

Wild men of Borneo think they can cheat the spirits which punish with disease by changing their names, said a scientist who lived for more than two years with the natives of central Borneo. During an address at south Borneo on "the medical science" of wild tribes, he said: "To prevent sickness, the Dyaks sacrifice animals or eggs, but they have no idea to whom they make such sacrifices. Every sickness, they believe, is the consequence of some violation of law; to evade punishment by spirits who cause sickness, a person who begins to feel unwell changes his or her name so as not to be located by the spirits. The gall bladder is regarded as the seat of intellect. To cure stomach trouble the Dyaks eat dried insects. Malaria and other epidemics are frequent. Crohnism (physical deformity and imbecility) is common."

Then—Deep Silence.

Little Miss Gwendolyn was discoursing affably with the rich widower who was quite interested in her mother. "If I send you a doll," said Mr. Rich-ardson, "should I have golden hair like yours?" Gwendolyn—"Oh, no, the next doll I get must have hair like mamma's—to take off and put on."

Big Shoe Sale Now Going On At Winter's

OHIO VALLEY CLOTHING AND SHOE CO.

An Event That Will Long Be Recalled

AN APPRECIATION SALE

It's Our Treat—We Want To Be Remembered

Most stores at this time of the year plan a campaign to unload a lot of merchandise that to carry over would be ruinous to them. They want to bait the people by offering certain articles at tempting prices. We are not of this class of merchants, for we feel that we have been treated too fairly by the buying public to try any catch penny methods. Then, we have no old stock that we must dispose of. We have been in business but a few short months, starting out with an elegant line of brand new merchandise, and keeping our stock as clean as newly minted dollars. The summer season is on — and it is likely we will have to duplicate our stock before the snow flies. We have received a much larger patronage than we anticipated when we opened our doors, although you will recall that we stated we believed lower prices and higher quality would win. And the combination has succeeded — establishing this store as the ideal place to trade.

And now it is our treat — we want a chance to prove our appreciation for your confidence and for your patronage. You have been good to us—you have bought our stock and while you have received full value and more for your money, nevertheless you could have gone elsewhere—hence, as we stated above, it is now up to us to prove our sincere friendship for the good people of Portsmouth and vicinity. Therefore we are going to inaugurate A SALE OF APPRECIATION —In other words, a "Golden Rule" sale—where we can make your dollars do the work of two—where your pennies will be worth nickles and dimes—just to show you that we can be the best fellows on earth and further cement your good will for this store.

This great event, which is going to be talked of for years to come will start on SATURDAY, JULY 9TH AT 8 A. M. and will continue for two weeks—ending on Saturday, July 23. Be the first to get in—and when once here, buy for months to come. For, friends, the prices have been slaughtered—cost entirely forgotten. We will lose a lot of money, but we are going to so thoroughly establish this store in your minds that you will come here the first place when you want

Try Yeast Vitamin With Your
 Meals—Easy And Economical
 To Take—Results Quick.

So remarkable is the action of Vitamins to increase the nervous strength-building power of what you eat, that one woman recently gained 25 pounds after being thin and ailing for years. VITAMIN contains highly concentrated yeast vitamins as well as the two other still more important vitamins (fat soluble
 A and Water Soluble C). Thousands of former "weak-textured" are now using this new method to put on firm flesh, clear the skin, revitalize the nerves and increase their physical and mental energies. You can do the same quickly, easily, and surely. Vitamin will not upset the stomach or cause gas, but on the contrary is a great aid to digestion and to correct constipation. Satisfactory results absolutely guaranteed or money back. Be sure to remember the name VIT-AMON—there is nothing else like it.

To Lubricate Fine Watches.
 Oil suitable for lubricating the bearings of fine watches and chronometers has heretofore been obtained almost exclusively from the maxillary fat of the porpoise. The cost of this lubricant is about $250 a gallon, which is almost prohibitive, notwithstanding the fact that only minute quantities of the oil are used. Recently a therougly satisfactory oil for this purpose has been obtained from petroleum by a new process and its cost is insignificant compared with that of the porpoise oil.—Popular Science Monthly.

Mr. Grimes Wins Golf Handicap

John L. Grimes of this city and who formerly was member of The Times reporter staff, has developed into a real golf player.

The Firestone News Bureau, published in Akron by the Firestone Rubber company, recently contained the following article about Mr. Grimes' prowess on the golf links:

"The annual 36-hole medal golf handicap event played Independence Day at Akron's well known Portage Country Club, resulted in a victory for J. L. Grimes, former Portsmouth man, who turned in a net score of 133. "Starting at 9 o'clock in a big field of entrants, the first eighteen holes were negotiated by noon. Play then continued without a break over the second round when Grimes and his opponent recorded the remarkable time of two hours for the 62nd yard. This is the fastest time in the club's history for championship play over the entire course.

"Grimes was a member of the Portsmouth Golf Club at Portsmouth several years ago.

Here's Proof City Is Growing

The city's rapid growth in area is reflected in a report just completed by City Engineer George S. Wilhelm, which shows that Portsmouth now covers 10,611 square miles of territory as compared with 2,245 square miles before October, 1917 when 1,81 square miles was added.

The village of Sciotoville containing 45 square miles, was annexed in 1920 and the Munir's Run territory, with 5,900 square miles, was taken in about the same time.

According to the engineer's figures, the city's growth in area during the four year period, 1917 to 1921, was 365 percent.

But There Was a Time.

Bligins for some years had gone the pace that kills only it didn't kill him, but merely reformed him. Then he joined the church and rose so high in its councils that he was sent to one of the big cities as delegate to a convention. "How was it?" asked a friend when he returned. "The convention? Oh, all right," answered Bligins. "But that town! Some town! If I'd only been a delegate to something there before I got converted!"—American Legion Weekly.

DETECTIVE IS ARRESTED IN IRONTON, ACCUSED OF TAKING LARGE SUM OF MONEY FROM MINERS

The Ironton Register Thursday said: Working his way into the confidence of the officials and members of the United Mine Workers of America, A. T. Hester, Baldwin-Felts detective arrested here by chief of Police Massie, is charged with having defrauded the mine workers' union out of more than $20,000. Hester claims that when he is returned to Williamson he can bring in two other men and between them they can account for $70,000.

According to the information obtained by Chief Massie, Hester secured the secret work that admitted him to the council of the United Mine Workers and he passed off as one of them. Gradually he worked himself up in their councils and soon became one of the relief workers, distributing large checks to the destitute miners and their families in the West Virginia fields.

Frank Keeney, of Mine District No. 17, of Charleston, W. Va., in telephonic communication with chief Massie said that Hester was badly wanted and authorized the chief to bring his prisoner to Charleston. Hester waived extradition and was taken to the West Virginia capital this afternoon.

A liberal reward has been offered for the arrest of Hester and it will be given to the chief.

Hester, who is 40 years of age, is alleged to have taken the money

Will Hold Union Services

The churches of New Boston will unite in outdoor gospel meetings during July and August. The services will be held on the lawn of the M. E. church. A choir made up of the choirs of the several churches will be formed under a good leader. The messages will be delivered by the local pastors but they hold it a secret as to who will speak on any particular evening.

The first service will be held next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Hall Cannot Be Prevented.

The theory that hall could be prevented by firing cannon or discharging explosives never was accepted by scientists, and careful experiments have shown that it has no foundation. The theory was advanced that the agitation caused by an explosion would prevent the formation of halitones.

TO DISCUSS NAVAL RESOLUTION

Sunday morning the Every Man's Bible Class of Franklin Avenue M. E. Sunday School will have presented to them for discussion a resolution on the proposed increase of the United States, the resolution having been drawn up by Judge Harry Ball, teacher of the class. The resolution after some discussion will be acted upon by the class.

Whereas in Naval Strength now: Great Britain ranks first with: $88200 T.

America ranks second with 407250 T.

Japan ranks third with 310140 T.

And whereas, if present plans are carried out in 1924, the naval strength will be:

America first with: 1117550 T.

Great Britain second with: $88200 T.

Japan third 543400 T.

And whereas, this vast increase in the United States naval strength will cost vast millions of dollars in the making and other vast millions annually in the maintenance.

And whereas, such increase means a stimulus to rivalry, in naval construction, wholly unnecessary and unjustified, and means a great waste of the national wealth, of this country as well as of the others who seek to rival us.

Therefore Be It Resolved, by the Every Man's Class of the Franklin Avenue M. E. church, that we are opposed to this naval program on the part of our country, and we hereby urge action on the part of this government that will bring together the leading nations of the world to the end that armament, naval and army shall be reduced to the lowest possible point, consistent with world safety and world peace.

And resolved further that we approve the efforts of Senator Borah of Idaho, made in this behalf.

Take Your "Shot" Now

All local young men who have signed up for the Citizens Military Training Camp at Camp Knox, Ky. for four weeks beginning July 21 are urged to present themselves to Dr. J. S. Rardin for vaccination at once. Time for filing applications closes Saturday, July 9, as the application must reach Fifth Army Corps, area headquarters, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana by July 10. Dr. Rardin has the serum for vaccination against typhoid fever and smallpox, and his services are free. It is better for the applicants to receive the inoculation here in order to prevent having sore arms after arrival at Camp.

Somewhat Embarrassing.

"The Child Study Club" was meeting at my home. I was on the program for a paper on "Discipline." I had just finished reading the same and a round table discussion was about to follow, when my youngest daughter, age 6, came into the house crying, her clothes muddy and torn. I hurriedly asked her what was the matter, and her older sister said, in tones audible to the whole club, "She's been down in the mud fighting with that bad V—boy."—Chicago American.

An Unusual Business Opportunity

Household Appliances

Six months ago two young salesmen were earning about $175.00 each per month. We gave them the opportunity to go into business for themselves and last month their net profit was $1150.00.

The same kind of an opportunity is now open in Portsmouth to capable individuals or reputable established dealers. It is the territorial franchise for the famous Gainaday Electrical Household Appliances—The Gainaday Electric Washer, The Gainaday Electric Ironer, The Gainaday Suction Cleaner, etc.

The Gainaday line is nationally advertised in Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping Magazine and Electrical Merchandising. The manufacturers (Pittsburgh Gage & Supply Co.) have been in business nearly 30 years and have resources of over $4,000,000.

The franchise is offered on an agency basis only. A minimum capital of $5000, is necessary to pay for store rent, equipment and operating expenses, but no investment in merchandise is required—we furnish stock and also finance all sales, including time payment accounts.

The assistance—financial, merchandising, advertising, administrative—and the training which the Company will give its new agents are so broad in scope that no man with the ability to sell can fail to succeed in a real way.

The two men referred to above are operating in a city of 50,000 population. The same plan is also working successfully in more than 50 other towns and cities ranging in population from 5,000 to 100,000.

If you are interested in the Gainaday proposition write us a detailed application stating your age, education, experience, and capital available. Should your application receive favorable consideration a personal interview will be arranged in Pittsburgh, at our expense.

WOOL MARKET

BOSTON
BOSTON, July 8—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

"The week has seen little change in the volume of business transacted or in the character of the demand. The call for wool still is largely for grades running three eights and finer and more especially for the staple or worsted wools. Prices show little change; in fact, there is hardly any quotable change in any grade. The mills, especially those making worsteds, are generally well engaged. In the west buying process continues on less steadily at steady prices. The tariff still furnishes food for conjecture in the trade and there is no doubt that the measure will have to be modified in certain respects as regards the wool schedule."

Peculiar Pets.

The big Brazilian iguana, a handsome fellow, is easily tamed. The common English toad, too, can be trained to live in a little house in the strawberry bed, made of four bricks, and soon recognizes its human friends. The great Wolsey had a pet carp. This is one of the shyest of fish, yet can soon be taught to come to the bank of its pond for food. So, too, can other fish. At Port Logan, in Wiltshire, England, there is a sort of salt-water pond out in the rocks, where the sea fish have been regularly fed for years past. The man in charge goes down to the water's edge, waves his basket and whistles, and at once a shoal of fish come scurrying from all parts of the pool. These are chiefly cod and haddock, and so tame are the cod that they will actually thrust their heads out of water in order to seize delicacies thrown to them.

Made Pets by Kind Treatment.

A recent record of educated water-snails reminds us of the fact that animal intelligence is not by any means confined to dogs, horses or even to blood-blooded animals, says a writer in London Answers. Given sufficient patience, there are very few living creatures that cannot be, to some extent, domesticated. Nearly all the lizards can be tamed and taught to know their owners. The writer once had a pet chameleon, which would take flies from his finger. A friend who had caught a young slowworm kept the creature for more than two years, and taught it to come to his hand and coil itself around his fingers.

A "Swamp" in Blotting-Paper.

Under the microscope blotting paper, when absorbing ink, resembles on a small scale a marsh matted with shrubs, sticks, and twigs, round which water is flowing. So the ink runs about among the fibers that together form the spongy water. There is a limit to the amount of liquid that a blotter will absorb, as there is a limit to the amount of water that a marsh will absorb before it overflows. The limit in the blotter is the combined capillary attraction of the fibrous strands, sticks, and twigs that together form the lauer.

Maurice Tourneur presents
The Last of the Mohicans

James Fenimore Cooper's Famous Novel, "The Last of the Mohicans," Conceived To Be One of the Best Pictures Ever Produced. Is the Attraction at the Strand Tonight and Saturday. You Cannot Afford to Miss This Treat.

"Never has such a picture been booked at the Strand Theatre" was the verdict of Manager Welch of that popular house after he had seen Maurice Tourneur's picturization of "The Last of the Mohicans," by J. Fenimore Cooper, which starts here Friday.

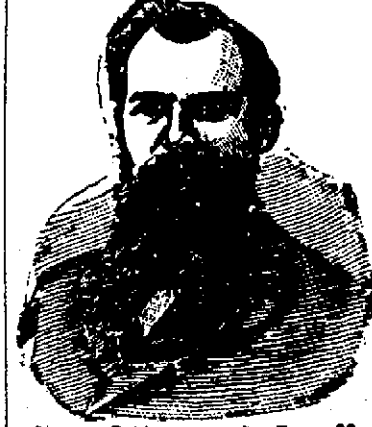

"There is everything for everybody," he continues "and not a member of the family can miss it, because it pleases the old folks by bringing happy remembrances of other days; for the middle-aged—the fathers and mothers of today—the appeal is strong because of the personal entertainment element with the value of the picture solely as an amusement. These parents have another interest, that of educating their children, for Cooper's famous book is used in school work, and by seeing the film, the youngsters are doubly impressed, and their interest in literature is stimulated."

"Then for the boys and girls! What kid has not 'played Indian' and enjoyed it? Not a one, indeed. Therefore every lad and lassie of Portsmouth will have the very time of their lives at the Strand when this big historical picture is shown. We urge you not to miss this wonderful production. Other strong attractions will be presented also."

THE MARKETS

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, July 8—The feature of the stock market at the dull and heavy opening of today's session was the 4½ points to the new low price of 49 as a result of the postponement of dividend action. Mexican Petroleum, American Sugar, American International, United Fruit and Bethlehem and Crucible Steels comprised the other backward issues with several of the motors and affiliated specialties. A few obscure issues made slight gains.

As the session progressed increased heaviness was shown by most leaders. On comparatively moderate offerings industrials and specialties lost 1 to almost five points. American Sugar, United Fruit, Harvesting, Mexican Petroleum and some of the motors, stocks and equipments were under marked pressure.

U. S. Rubber rallied slightly only to fall below its early quotation. Canadian Pacific and some of the south and southwestern issues were heavy. Call money opened and moved into next week at 5½ per cent.

Chicago Grain And Provisions

CHICAGO
CHICAGO, July 8—Dowturns in wheat prices resulted today from optimistic current; the government crop report would be only moderately bullish, as the deterioration of the spring crop would be offset in a measure by the advance in the par basis for the month. July delivery, however, showed relative strength as rains were said to have delayed threshing in Kansas and Nebraska, and country offerings were only fair. Opening quotations which varied from 3-4c lower to 2c advance, with September 1.19 3-4 to 1.21 and December 1.23 1-2, were followed by setbacks all around to well below yesterday's finish.

Corn eased off with wheat, although a transient bulge resulted from export sales of 750,000 bushels. After opening unchanged to 1-2c lower, including September at 60 1-2 to 60 3-4, the market scored moderate gains but then underwent another sag.

The close was firm ¼c to 2c net higher with September 1.21 1-2 to 1.21 3-4 and December 1.24 1-2 to 1.24 3-4.

Oats were governed by the course of other cereals, starting unchanged to 1-2c lower, September 38 to 38 1-4, and developing but little power to rally.

Indication of export demand for hard gave firmness to provisions.

The market closed steady ¼c net lower to ½c advance, with September 60 1-2 to 60 3-4.

But above all, because if I set my money to work for me and add enough to it regularly and faithfully some day it will care for me and my family, whether I work or not.

"Why Should I Invest?"

Because I worked hard for the surplus money I have and I am entitled to have it work hard for me now.

Because my surplus money and my neighbors' are that capital which is necessary to the life of the country's industries and transportation and agriculture: because if we withhold it they will suffer and as a consequence my food, my clothing, the things I use in my work, everything I need or want, will cost more and more.

But above all, because if I set my money to work for me and add enough to it regularly and faithfully some day it will care for me and my family, whether I work or not.

AUTO TURNS OVER, CATCHES FIRE, BURNS UP; DRIVER FORCED TO CRAWL THRU WINDSHIELD

Earl Parks, a steelworker, who lives at 3168 Walnut street, East Portsmouth, had a close call from being burned to death yesterday when his automobile left the road just east of the Narrows back of Sciotoville, and caught fire after turning over. He was forced to break the windshield and crawl through it to prevent the flames, which enveloped the car, from reaching him. The car was virtually destroyed. Other occupants were thrown out, but suffered only minor bruises.

The accident happened near a small culvert that leads from the road to Bousser's Run, back of Sciotoville. Parks says the poor condition of the culvert caused his machine to swerve to one side and before he could right it the car left the road, turned over and caught fire. All that is left of it today is the chassis. The machine had seen much use, but was in good running order, Parks says. He carried no insurance on the machine.

BIHLMAN HIT BY THROWN BALL

Paul Bihlman catcher for the Red-tails team in the Municipal League was knocked out for a few minutes last night when he was hit on the forehead with a thrown ball. It was thrown from third to home to catch a runner but the sun blinded Bihlman and he could not see the sphere which hit him with sufficient force to lay him out for a short time. The prints of the stitches of the ball were left on his forehead. He later returned to the game.

Grocers Specials Win Real Babe Ruth Match

More fun than that provided in a ten reel comedy was to be seen in that ball game played between the grocer's teams at York park Thursday afternoon, the contest resulting 20 to 16 in favor of Ben F. Stewart's Specials the losers being Henry P. Heilig's Sluggers. This was the third game between these teams and twice Stewart's team has won out. The Sluggers taking the sandwich contest. The feature of the contest yesterday was the routing of oje, Ben F. Stewart, who was not on the diamond but who helped his team to victory by yelling at the opposing team in such a manner that they became rattled and let the Specials cut down a 14 run lead and win out.

The Specials staged their big rally in the sixth when the Sluggers "went up" for good. "Cricket" Kemp and Bill Frye worked in the box for the Sluggers but they could not stop the Specials once they got started: although it was several innings before they got that way.

Mittendorf twirled a steady game for the specials, errors letting in most of the Sluggers' runs.

Next Thursday the grocer's team will play the Gilbert Grocery Company's nine of the Municipal League at Millbrook park.

PESKY BED BUGS

Bedbug (Cimex lectularius). The origin of the name bedbug is unknown, but is supposed to be naturally suggested as it is descriptive. There are many local names for these parasites, as for Illinois "Chimches," from Baltimore comes the name "Mahogany Flats," in New York they are styled as "Red Coats," around Pittsburgh they are called "Pesty Devils," in Cincinnati and the South "Night-crawlers," in St. Louis and Chicago district "Crimson Ramblers," the great West "Pilgrims." The old saying "the bedbug has no teeth, but they get there just the same," is correct. Instead of teeth they possess a piercing and sucking beak to draw and rob you of your blood for their own body.

Bedbugs, no matter what you may call them, or where they came from, science has found a way to rid them if you will use faithfully the new chemical Pesky Devils Quiescent "P. D. Q." A see package makes one quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas, ants or cockroaches and their eggs as well. P. D. Q. will not injure bedding, and each package contains a patent sprout to enable you to get them in the hard-to-get-into places. Impossible for Pesky Devils to exist where P. D. Q. is used. Sold by Fisher & Streich and Flood & Blake, druggists.

COURT HOUSE

Wife Makes Many Charges

Dr. Frank C. Goodwin, prominent dentist with offices in the Security Bank building, is made defendant in a suit for divorce and alimony filed in Common Pleas court Friday by Grace L. Goodwin, 1308 Fourth street.

In her petition filed through Attorney R. F. Kimble the plaintiff says they were married August 10, 1892, and then complains that in disregard of their marital duties he very shortly after the marriage became abusive and brutal toward her and during all their married life he has maintained an attitude of cruelty, coercion and intimidation which she asserts she bore in silence rather than expose the unhappiness of their own life to her friends.

She also alleges that the defendant during many years of their married life was addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors and squandered his means for drink and in other ways unknown to her; that upon numerous occasions he had delirium tremens and became so abusive and threatening, flourishing a revolver and other weapons that none of his neighbors would render him assistance and that she cared for and nursed him back to health alone. She says that she has been required to assist the defendant financially at numerous times and upon one occasion when he was arrested and prosecuted for practicing dentistry without license, she and her relatives were required to furnish the necessary means for his defense, no part of which she claims has been repaid. Since then she declares she has been allowed barely enough to support herself and defendant and that she has been cursed and abused because she attempted to save a little from her allowance, asserting that he refused to live with her until she turned the savings over to him. The plaintiff further recites that the defendant has repeatedly humiliated her by telling her that he hated her, despised his home and by accusing her falsely of unchastity, and calling her vile and indecent names in the presence of her friends and by gossiping on the streets and elsewhere with those whom he chanced to meet, speaking evil and starting rumors concerning her, involving moral turpitude. Furthermore, she charges, that he is by nature ill-tempered, overbearing, unreasonable and cruel and that during all their married life he has been neglectful of her, repeatedly associated with other women under questionable circumstances and in the last three years over her protests and pleadings, has abandoned her as his wife, for the wrongful associations of other women and totally abandoned her on April 1, 1921, she says, since when he has inadequately provided her with common necessities. She further says that he has large sums of money, more than $10,000 which for a number of years he has been in the habit of secreting, besides being the owner of a farm valued at $10,000 in Fulton county and other real estate situated in this city and other personal property including his office fixtures valued at $2,000.

On June 24, 1921, the plaintiff states that at the instance and request of the defendant and because she was deeply humiliated at the prospect of her unhappy home life becoming public, she signed a written agreement making a division of their property and under the terms of which she was to have for her own the home property on Fourth street, together with all the furnishings and $150 in money in lieu of all claims for alimony. She now complains that he refuses to convey the property and that he has entered the home and removed certain furniture and by reason of such acts she asks that the agreement be set aside and for an equitable division of their property.

A temporary injunction was granted tying up all the defendant's property until the case can be heard on its merits.

Roster Youth Found Guilty

A finding of guilty was made Friday by Judge Gilliland in the case of Thomas Roster, aged 12 years, son of Thomas Roster, of Castle Hill, Scottdale, charged with delinquency in connection with the theft of money from the trousers of Bernard Maynard while the latter was in swimming. Maynard claimed he lost $40 but the youth protested he took but one $5 bill. The lad was fined $5 and costs which was paid and he was released from custody.

Widow Named Administratrix

Ida Williams was appointed by the probate court Friday administratrix of the estate of her late husband, David L. Williams, who died recently at his home in this city, leaving property with an estimated value of $40,150 represented by $25,000 personally and $15,150 realty.

John Jones, Frank Vincent and Henry Bertram were named as appraisers of the estate.

Youth Committed To Lancaster

Thomas Lester, 15, Boundary street youth, arrested several days ago for delinquency in connection with the theft of bicycles and milk tickets, was committed in juvenile court Friday and Judge Gilliland ordered the lad committed to the Boys Industrial School at Lancaster.

Proceedings Dismissed

Hearing on a motion made by the defendant in the case of Edith Beck-Bentley, New Boston, against Dewey Beck, steelworker to modify a former order of the court in respect to the custody of their minor son, was suddenly terminated in Common Pleas court Friday when Judge Thomas dismissed the motion after being advised that Beck was considerable in arrears in payments ordered by the court for the support of the child who was confined to the custody of the mother at the time she was granted a divorce three years ago.

The mother has since remarried and the child is staying with her aunt in this city and has a good home, the court was advised.

Attorney R. F. Kimble for the former wife and Attorneys Blair and Blair for Beck.

Returned To Fayette County

Arrested at their home near Otway by Sheriff Ricker, Wednesday night, Earl Miller, 25 years old and Herschell Miller, 18 years old, brothers, were turned over to Sheriff N. B. Hall of Fayette county, who returned the prisoners to Washington C. H., Thursday to meet charges of alleged contributing to the delinquency of Daisy Butcher, 15 year old Bloomington girl.

"Old John" Caused All Trouble

The divorce and alimony suit of Margaret Moore, New Boston, against Zeke Moore, steelworker, was heard by Judge Thomas in Common Pleas court Friday and then continued for one week to give the plaintiff an opportunity to think over a proposition to give the defendant another chance.

They were married at Greenup, Ky., Feb. 22, 1915, and the evidence clearly showed that the troubles between the couple had been the propensity of Moore to use intoxicating liquor to excess.

The court stated that upon the evidence the wife was entitled to a divorce but urged her to think over the matter of a reconciliation for the sake of their three children in view of the assurance given by the husband to abstain from the use of liquor under any test that may be prescribed.

The wife admitted that Moore was a good husband when not under the influence of liquor but declared he had broken his promises so often to quit drinking that she had lost confidence in him. The court stated

Here is the latest Ford story!

"We use our car for chasing wolves, coyotes and foxes. We must have casings that stand up, for we make our own roads, and after trying a number of different makes we find there is no tire like Diamond. Wolves go fast, coyotes faster and we go fastest—consequently we have supreme confidence in Diamonds."

Mrs. DeLotel Seeks Divorce

Kate DeLotel, 919 Ninth street, charges cruelty, neglect and infidelity in her suit for divorce, and alimony with custody of their minor child filed in Common Pleas court Thursday against Walter DeLotel, 1109 Mill street, employed at the N. & W. shops, whom she married May 12, 1915.

In her petition filed through Attorneys Blair and Blair, the plaintiff says that DeLotel has cursed and abused her, assaulted, choked and beat her and claims that he has failed and refused to support her and their child. Furthermore she declares he is fond of associating with other women.

At a hearing on an application for temporary alimony Judge Thomas Friday ordered the defendant to pay $5 a week to his wife pending the hearing of the case on its merits. Attorneys Blair and Blair for the wife and B. F. Kimble for DeLotel.

The Scotch National Instrument.

The bagpipe, Scotland's national instrument, is of great antiquity, having been used by the ancient Greeks and Hebrews. Scotland is by no means its original home, for it is thought to have been introduced into that country after William the Conqueror entered England in 1066. In the fifteenth century it was among the favorite instruments in Germany and elsewhere in Europe, evidence shows. Though fallen generally into disuse, with the growth of musical refinement, the bagpipe is still popular among the country people of Poland, Italy, France and Ireland, and of course among the Highlanders of Scotland.

Piant Makes Fine Hedge.
Japanese hydrangea (Paniculata Grandiflora) makes a very showy hedge, both in August when it is covered with panicles of white bloom and later when the flowers have turned to old rose and green. These blossoms, if picked before frost, retain their beauty all winter when placed in a vase without water.

Various Effects.
"Do you think music is calculated to soothe the insane?" "In some cases," replied Miss Cayenne, quietly. "Whether music soothes or promotes mental disturbance depends entirely on the kind of music."

IS THE HOTTEST WEEK ON RECORD; TEMPERATURE REACHED 95 TODAY

At 2:45 this afternoon the mercury recorded. Need it be said that the week will go down in history as the hottest in the history of the city. Plant To Turn Out 600,000 Suits A Year

According to the Cincinnati Times-Star, Arthur Nash, better known as "Golden Rule" Nash, who spoke here at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon this year, is to bring his tailoring factory from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Cincinnati where it will be combined with the big plant already there. With the business combined it is said the A. Nash Company will have the largest tailor shop in the world, turning out a suit or overcoat in 15 seconds, 2,000 garments a day, or 600,000 a year.

LUCASVILLE TO GET PLAYGROUND

Lucasville is to have a community playground, one that will be fully equipped with all playground devices that are to be found in the larger cities. A meeting of the Lucasville citizens will be held tonight at the Community Hall to organize for the playground. Lucasville is taking the playground step under the direction of the Red Cross of this country. Already close to $700 have been subscribed and it is hoped to raise $1,000 before work is started. Dr. D. N. Thomas who has ground adjoining the village school site has agreed to give a ten year lease on part of the ground for playground purposes. It is planned to start work on the playgrounds within thirty days. A ball diamond, tennis courts, horse-shoe pitching courts, will be laid out at once. It is probable that slide boards, teeters, swings, etc., may be erected later but the organization does not intend to spend a big sum on equipment this late in the season. A wading pool may be installed next year.

RECORD CORN CROP; CUT IN WHEAT PRODUCTION FORECAST

WASHINGTON, July 8—A reduction of twenty-one million bushels in the nation's wheat crop during the last month, prospect of a record production of corn with the condition of the crop on July 1 better than it has been in more than 26 years, and a tobacco production some four hundred million less than last year's record crop, featured the government's monthly report, issued today. The July crop report of the department of agriculture, issued today, giving forecasts of production from condition of the crops July 1, shows: Winter wheat—production forecast 574,000,000 bushels, condition 77.2. Spring wheat—Production 235,000,000 bushels, condition 80.8. All wheat—Production 809,000,000 bushels, condition 78.2.

Acquire Big Field For Parking Purposes

At a meeting of the Scioto County Fair Board this afternoon, plans were discussed for acquiring seven acres of the big field just south of the Fair grounds, the new ground to be used for parking space for automobiles. Last year hundreds of machines were parked inside the Fair grounds and there was considerable difficulty in getting in and out of the main gate. This year the Fair Board will lay off the seven acres in special parking places for machines which will be a big improvement over the parking of machines here and there in the Fair grounds. There will be three entrances and turnstiles from the parking field into the Fair grounds which will allow the auto parties to enter the grounds by walking just a short distance instead of walking from the parking field to the main gate on Scioto Trail.

The Crops of Nepal.

The chief crops of Nepal, an independent kingdom in Northern India on the southern slope of the Himalaya mountains, are rice, tea, sugar cane, tobacco and cotton. These crops are raised on thousands of small, intensively cultivated farms in the southern part of the kingdom. This region is a broad, fertile plain watered by the Karnali, Gandak and Kosi rivers. Among the mountain ranges of the north, where there is small opportunity for farming every foot of land in the narrow valleys is used. The hillside are terraced and the mountain streams utilized for irrigation. In this region there are grown the harder crops, such as barley, corn, wheat, buckwheat and pulse. Though pastures are scarce, the few sheep raised are noted for their fine wool.

Many Slept On Grass In Parks

CLEVELAND, July 8—The heat claimed its sixth victim here when Michael Czeky, a carpenter, died in a hospital last night following a fall from a scaffold when overcome by the heat. With the mercury hovering around the 90 mark last night all records for summer were broken by attendance at the parks and beaches. Many seeking relief slept on the grass in the parks last night.

Kessler Fined

Hearing of the evidence in the case of Charles B. Kessler, 6414 street, soft drink proprietor, charged with the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor in Municipal court Friday resulted in a finding of guilty by Judge Sprague who assessed a fine of $200 and costs.

It was claimed by the prosecution that liquor was found at the Kessler establishment by officers in a raid on the place several days ago.

Passed for Sentence Steele Bond, West Side man arrested a week ago on a charge of unlawfully possessing intoxicating liquor, pleaded guilty Friday when arraigned before Squire McManes and the magistrate passed his case until Saturday for sentence.

Blair Dismissed

Clive Blair, 24 years old, of the West Side, who was arrested on June 22 on a charge of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, was exonerated in Municipal court Friday when Judge Sprague, after hearing the evidence, dismissed his complaint for lack of convincing evidence. The accused was represented by Attorney Stanley McCall.

Animals Carry Own Light

There are 30 orders of animals that are self-luminous. These include many forms of protozoa, hydroids, jellyfish, bryozoa, polychaete and oligochaete worms, brittle stars, crustacea, myriapods, insects, molluscs, primitive chordates and fishes. None of the luminous species inhabit fresh water, all being terrestrial or marine. The luminosity is sometimes shown by both larvae and adults, and in a few instances by eggs. In experiments made, two substances have been isolated—luciferase, and enzyme, and luciferin, a protein—and the light appears to result from bringing these together in the presence of oxygen and water.

ADOPTING TED

By JACK LAWTON.

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Thadens went along the tree-bordered path, feeling strangely at variance with his surroundings. Conventional and primitive ways were not accustomed things to the city banker. And so long had he bent over cash drawers and intricate figuring, in his impressive steel cage, that Thadens himself acquired an important aloofness born of his task. He fretted now indignantly against his doctor's unusual prescription.

"One restless day in the country," the great man said, "will do more for you than bottles of medicine. A restful month would do better." Thadens rebelled against the month—that would be unbearable. He knew that his nerves of late had been piling up misery in many unexpected ways, and he knew also that he must relax and find a changing of ways.

He thought, as he stepped distastefully over the dust of his own gloomy home in the city, with crabbled Hannah in charge of constantly changing maids, and he wondered after all, what his struggle for money had amounted to. Certain it was that it brought no happiness nor happiness in store. But he had been placed in the treadmill, and because of his skill, must go on and on, endlessly counting and accumulating more dollars. Perhaps it was a breath of sweet clover across the fields which caused him to think of love, something vaguely sweet and comforting, which had passed him by. There was not much chance now that love would come to him to stay. He was too busily absorbed and unapproachable.

The manner had grown upon him, with the loneliness of his years, and he was, after all, not sure that he wished to be shaken out of the accepted way. He stooped to brush a leaf from his palm-branch suit, and encountered—surprisingly, a child's grasping hand.

"Daddy!" cried the child delightedly. "Daddy!" Thadens frowned, the warm moist little body was pressing against his immaculate trousers. "Take me," commanded the intruder. "Take me up. Ted's tired; Ted's lost." Gazing at the boy, Thadens hesitated uncertainly, then with an inexplicable impulse lifted him in his arms; clinging small arms encircled the man's neck.

How trustfully now he lay in his arms. Thadens reflected sulkily, that no creature had ever before confidingly sought his protection or turned to him in seeking affection. That was strange—too. At the bend of the road he saw a young woman. She was seated on the clover dotted grass, resting against a tree, an open book in her hands. At sight of himself with the boy's curly head on his shoulder the woman smiled—a welcoming smile.

"How do you do?" she said. "I see you have found my boy." Thadens, though he had for such a brief moment glimpsed her, was conscious of distinct disappointment. "Your boy?" Thadens repeated, "yes, I found him." She leaned forward eagerly. "And you like Ted?"

"I suppose that I do like Ted. He took me for his father, called me Daddy. Perhaps your boy has not seen his father for a time." The young woman reached up to relieve him of the sleeping burden.

"Ted's father is dead," she explained gently. "Ted does not remember him at all."

"Too bad," Thadens murmured confusedly. "Nice little chap. Rather took to me," he added pleased.

The girl raised her dark eyes to his. "Would you like," she asked calmly, "to take Ted, and keep him?"

Thadens gasped. She was evidently serious in her question, earnestly awaiting his reply.

"You could do so much for him," she explained, "so very much more than I. You see, I happen to know who you are. I have seen you in the bank—many years. Of course, she smiled again. "You would not remember me."

Thadens sat speechless. When he found his voice he tried to make it coldly disapproving. But this was difficult before the entreating softness of the girl's dark eyes.

"You—the boy's mother!" he exclaimed, "would give him away—to a stranger?"

The young woman wrinkled her pretty brows perplexedly. "I, Ted's mother?" she repeated. "Why the poor little soul is an orphan. I brought him out here with me on my vacation, for two weeks of fresh air in the country. Ted is for adoption; and they wrote me from the asylum that any possible applicant would be directed here, so I took you for an applicant. Ted has been taught to say 'mother' or 'father.' Ingratulatingly. Poor forlorn little Ted!"

Thadens sat promptly down on the grass, regardless of cream colored clothing. "Let's talk this thing over," he said. "If you can make me see it my duty to give Ted his chance, why I'll do it."

"In that event," mused the girl, "I would expect you to allow me to call upon him at your house, say, once or twice a week to advise with you concerning my boy."

"Ted," agreed Thadens decidedly, "may consider himself adopted. Now, let me carry him back with you to the place where you are stopping."

Flat-Foot Facts. Are you flat-footed? If you don't know, the next time you take a bath, observe the impressions that your wet feet make. If your feet are normal, there will be a narrow line from heel to toe on the outside; if they are flat, the entire bottom of the foot will show.

How can you correct flat-footedness? Buy a handful of marbles, place them in two rows, and start picking them up with your toes. To do this you must curl up your toes; as a result the muscles of the feet will be exercised and thereby strengthened.

PASSING OF FAMOUS N. Y. SITE—THE CURB MARKET

The Curb Market on Broad street, just below Wall street, New York City, the spot where daily for the past 35 years the hectic flourishing of fingers, has meant the exchange of millions of dollars will be no longer, for on July 10, the New York curb brokers' association moved into their newly erected building and hereafter all trading will be done indoors. The passing of the Curb Market is a blow to New York's financial district, inasmuch as it brought thousands of sightseers every day to watch the waving of hands which meant nothing to them and so much to others. The photograph shows the Curb Market in action. In the background can be seen the columns of the Sub-treasury Building.

LOVE AND THEORY

By JOSEPHINE S. BROOKS.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Ellen went strolling around the house, happy to toll for love of her dear ones. She felt that nothing mattered if they all remained well. How thankful she ought to be for these blessings.

Her song, rising clearer this sunny morning, was cut short by the ring of the doorbell. Ellen smoothed her hair, cast aside her work apron, and then hastened to the door.

"I heard you singing and I don't see how you do it," said Elsie Smith, the caller.

"Do what, Elsie?" asked the hostess in surprise.

"Why, be so cheerful and happy in such—"

"In so humble a home?" supplied Ellen.

"Well, that was my thought—then I mean your work. You do work hard, Elsie, and you can't deny it. And for what? No one gives you any credit."

"Credit, Elsie? No true wife does it for that, but out of love."

"Love is all very well for a while, but year after year, to go without rest, with no vacations, is unjust. I'll never marry a man who makes me work all the time."

Ellen stood silent. She wondered if her face had lines in it like this friend's of thirty-five birthdays.

"Oh, Ellen," The young woman clasped her hands. "I have a plan. Let your husband do your work for one day and I'll wager your trying times will end."

"You think it over, Ellen," tempted Elsie, "and see if I'm not right. I'm studying these subjects, and I know what I'm talking about. Assert yourself. Good-by."

The young wife's song had ceased. The sun shone less brightly and her task now seemed heavier. As the hours passed bitter thoughts grew and magnified.

"Come to think of it, John's kisses of late have been hasty, with no earnestness in them. Is his love weakening? He seems to take my many cares as a matter of course; also my attentions to himself. Once, he thanked me; now he is always in a rush."

Ellen left her work and sat down by the table, hand on chin. Soon she rose.

"I'll do it," she whispered. "I'll go—let's see, it's Saturday. I'll go tomorrow after John and Rodney start for their walk. I'll leave a note saying that I must have a vacation of a few days."

Ellen imagined, when on her way to Cousin Jane's, how amazed John and their boy must be as they read her note.

She laughed as the picture of him tugging at the big pile of washing, blankets and all, arose. Perhaps he would revolt.

Ellen's thoughts were not all joyous, as she swung next day in the hammock beneath her cousin's elm tree. She had missed the "hasty kisses" that morning.

In the morning a very determined woman faced her cousin.

"I can't stand it another minute, Aime," declared Ellen.

As the wife neared her journey's end, she breathed: "After all, home looks good. There's no sign of life. No doubt John and Rod are at work."

Ellen entered the hall, where a sense of emptiness seemed to strike her. She pushed into the dining room, then went on to the kitchen. A noise startled her. She opened the door, and paused on the threshold.

"Washing dishes, mother," the boy answered, as if dish-washing were an ordinary task.

"Father has been—phew," came from Rodney, as he heartily let fall a cup.

Without waiting for the boy's answer the mother dashed into the bedroom, where upon the bed lay her John.

"John, John," she sobbed. "I'll never leave you again." Then out came the whole story. "She's wrong, utterly wrong," she snapped. "It's love, not theory, that counts. What happened, dear?"

She fell by the bedside and began kissing the hand that hung down.

"It was washing," feebly answered John, with close-shut eyes. As Ellen bent over him his eyes unclosed and a mischievous light shone in them.

"I scalded my foot from the boiler water slopping on it, so Rodney had to leave his work and do the house-keeping."

"And all this evil came about through my—my sin," she cried. "I was trying to prove Elsie's theory."

"I've had my lesson, and it has done me good. Dear wife, for I was becoming thoughtless. Such washings! They are too hard for you."

"I just love them—now, John. They'll be reminders of my cruel treatment of you."

As soon as John could free himself from the clinging arms, he rose and hobbled to a chair.

"Why, John! I thought you were too weak to move."

"A little lesson for you as a reminder," he laughed. "But my foot isn't entirely well, Rodney, when you can leave your work, come and kiss your mother."

"To think of all the mischief my act caused. Won't I triumph over Elsie and her theory!" Ellen vowed, as she sat, once more content, with her arms around her dear ones.

SHEILA

By AGNES GRAHAM BROGAN

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

The white cottage stood far back from the roadside. On its veranda rocking comfortably, sat a gray-haired woman, her fingers busy with a pair of fresh peas. A girl was approaching. The woman called to an old man plodding about the garden.

"Daniel," she asked, "now who do you suppose is coming to see us?" "It isn't Camilla," he replied. "At first I thought that it might be Camilla."

His wife laughed softly.

"You wouldn't expect our daughter to hunt us out in our humbleness, would you?" she questioned.

The woman arose waiting, as the girl came nearer; she was a dew-eyed, wild-rose sort of creature, with a perfectly evidently new hat on her dark wavy hair.

"If you please," she asked, "would you direct me to the Junction, where the trains go on to the city?"

"The Junction is five miles or more from here," the old man answered her, "and the road rough and uneven. Were you hoping to walk there to-night?"

The girl's eyes filled with tears.

"I did not know that it would be so far," she hesitated.

"You cannot have walked here from Ocean View," the woman interposed. "You have sent your car back, perhaps?"

The girl turned.

"I will tell you why," she replied. "It is because—I am running away."

The woman picked up her pan of peas. "Daniel," she called, "come here."

Reluctantly the man in overalls came.

"First," said the girl, "you must promise not to betray my confidence."

"Yes, my dear," she said.

"It was a week ago," the girl began, "that I was married. A hastily-arranged marriage, because of the death of my grandfather. Always, I had lived with Grandfather Craigie, in a tiny house that was his home. I knew no other, while he was all that I ever had. But we were very happy together in our bare, neat little home that I loved to tend; with his chickens and his vegetables to keep him busy. At evening we would sing the old Scotch songs he loved, and we did not miss the outside world, because we knew so little of it until—the artist man came. I call him that still sometimes, in thought, although he is now my husband."

He was drawing pictures for the magazines when we met, and stopped to visit with grandfather one evening in passing. Later, he begged Grandfather Craigie to let me pose for him. There was something about my hair that the artist liked, and my eyes; it was very strange, and he colored it all most beautifully into a picture, and called the picture "Sheila," which is my name. And when grandfather went so suddenly—my artist man whom I had grown to love—oh! so dearly, made me his wife, and brought me to the great Ocean View for our bridal trip before returning to the city where his home is. And I was happy—happy, until last night his sister came on to meet me, and I heard her talking later with my husband on the balcony of the hotel outside our window. They did not know that I heard, for I had left them to run down to the wonderful beach. It was my cape I came back for, when I heard this sister speak my name.

"That impossible Scotch girl," she angrily called me, and challenged my husband.

"How are you going to show such a wife to mother?"

"And as I stood shocked and unwilling to go, I learned what an unfortunate marriage my artist had made, and how my own humbleness and crudeness would ever hold him back from that success which meant so much to him."

"So, because I knew that he would not accept my sacrifice, I planned to run away. He had taught me to ride on his favorite horse, so that seemed the easiest way to start. I knew that Prince would find his way back when I should let him go. So, stubbornly, Prince went his way. Now that he has brought me here, will you shelter me until morning? Please do not try to reason otherwise, I have thought it all out. I am not their kind. I could not stay to hear the reproach of those hard, disappointed old people of whom the sister spoke."

The gray-haired woman arose and put a protecting arm about the girl.

"Father," she ordered, "bring that little traveling bag inside."

"We will never let you go," the gray-haired woman said, "you shall stay and be to us a daughter. Our daughter married and went away."

"Very far away," added the old man sadly.

Then on one of the peaceful evenings, quite as a matter of course, came Sheila's artist husband.

"For Prince carried you very naturally to the place where you belong," he told her, "this small house, dearest heart of mine, is the silent spot that I keep for deepest studies. Here mother and father love to come at times to live again those days when life meant only work and each other. Black Prince brought you home to us Sheila."

"And you will find," said the mother smiling, "that neither your husband nor his horse, make mistakes."

INEZ AND TRILBY MAY STORIES

BY SEWELL FORD

Trilby and the False Alarms

I'll say this much for Inez: she's a self-starter. She may not look it, with those placid eyes and the restful way she has of manipulating her gum. And her conversation is surely as sketchy as it can be made without using a code. But somehow she manages to get things going.

Even here when we're spending a few workless and jobless days at Miss Welby's boarding house. And when we first came to this place, you know, Inez acted just as much at home as if she was a young elephant lately imported from the jungle. Of course, she didn't away restles and flap her ears. Inez hasn't that kind of ears. But for a week she hardly took her eyes off her plate during meals and I couldn't get a word out of her when anyone else was in the dining room. She seemed to lapse into a rigid, wooden state, almost as lifeless as a dress model in a show window. I understood. Part of that was due to her Swedish disposition, and the rest was her backwoods bringing up.

By degrees, though, she got so that she would stare around cautiously, until she saw someone looking her way, and when she found it was quite possible to "size" up without personal injury, she rolled her eyes quite a lot.

"Well, Inez," I asked her once, "what's your verdict on Miss Welby's collection of homo more-or-less caplains?"

"Hey!" says Inez, blinking suspiciously at me. "What do you think of the bunch?"

"Lotta freaks," announces Inez promptly. "Eh?"

"Oh, no more so than the usual run," says I. "They're strangers, that's all. We may look freaky to them, too, you know."

"Huh!" says Inez, unconvinced. "Fact," says I. "But they're getting used to us and don't gawp quite as much as they did when we first came. Some seem almost human. For instance, the stout lady with the high chest and the gray streak through her front hair. She's been nodding at me almost folksy. See! She's smiling across at you now."

"Oh, yes-a!" says Inez, almost turning the smile. "I kinda like her."

"She's a Mrs. Marvin and has the third floor front," says I. "Ruby, the waitress told me. Then there's the young lady vamp who always wears a big floppy hat; the one over at the little table by the wall. How about her?"

"Her I no like," says Inez. "Stuck up."

"Not necessarily," says I. "Second floor hall bedroom. Comes from some little town in Maryland and is taking voice culture. Probably a village belle who hopes to break into grand opera. Here's a snappy young person just drifting in. Now how does he strike you, Inez?"

"Fresh," says Inez. "None fresher," says I. "But you don't expect a high-class automobile salesman to be a shrinking violet, do you? Ruby says he's a free tipper, too, and she ought to know. Her favorite, though, seems to be the other young chap at the same table, the one with the slick light hair and the smiling blue eyes. I notice she always serves him first."

Inez ventures a sideways glance and nods approvingly. "Kinda nice," says she. "What's he do?"

"Let's ask Ruby," says I. "My guess is that he's a clerk in a jewelry store, flat silver department. Looks sort of quiet and refined, and as if he could say, 'Yes, Madame; we'll have them marked and sent. Cor-tain!'"

But Ruby says I've made a poor guess. "That's Mister Barry Platt," says she. "Writes pieces for the newspaper. Smart, he is. Nice feller, too. Gives me tickets to shows sometimes."

"There's your chance, Inez," says I, as Ruby goes out after two orders of lamb stew for us. "Be the guess of the Iron Range on him. Show him your dimples. Eh? Don't think you can vamp him at this distance? Say, when he's so easy he gives theatre passes to an Afro-American brunette from East 135th Street, a real ash blonde from Duluth like you ought to have a walk-away."

But Inez only ducks her head and simmers. "Maybe you get acquainted with him first," she suggests. "If that's a deb, watch me."

Somewhat I had a hunch that this Mrs. Marvin was the one to get on chatty terms with first. She seemed to know almost everybody in the dining room, nodding familiarly to the different tables as she came and went, and stopping here and there for a word. So I didn't hesitate to spring my smile on her next time she passed, and before the week was out we were real folksy.

Knowing Mrs. Marvin was worth while, too. It was almost as good as taking the local paper in a small town. She could, and did, tell us something about nearly everybody in the house. "Isn't Miss Welby a dear?" she rattles on. "Not the sort of person one usually finds running a boarding house. Very well connected, I am told; old Baltimore family—her father was a judge or something. She was a beauty at 19 and became engaged to a young man she met in Washington, someone connected with a foreign embassy. It turned out that he was really of royal blood and wasn't allowed to marry out of his class. And after an affair such as that—Well! At which Mrs. Marvin spreads out her hands."

"Naturally," says I. "If one can't be a princess one can at least be a landlady."

"Oh, that happened years later, after she'd lost nearly all her property," explains Mrs. Marvin. "You've noticed that sweet little Miss Polly Powell, too, haven't you? The one in the picture hat. She has a wonderful voice, they say, but I do hope it isn't so that she's thinking of going on at the Winter Garden in the chorus. Wouldn't that be a shame?"

I agreed that it would, not that I begrudged that particular chorus something which would make it easy to listen to as well as easy to see, but it seemed to be the thing to say. Also Mrs. Marvin told us that the head was Mr. Campbell, a Scotch clerk in the linen department of a big Fifth Avenue store, and that he was a good deal of a grouch, but wrote every Sunday to his old mother in Glasgow, and never read any other newspaper than The Glasgow Herald, which came every Friday. She pointed out a dried up little old lady who wore a neck ruff and a big cameo pin and whispered that years ago she had been named as co-respondent in a sensational divorce case, but that now she was quite respectable and had a married daughter living in Flushing.

"Really?" says I. "And how about the two young men at your left? Anything thrilling about them?"

"Oh, you mean Barry Platt and Penfield White?" says Mrs. Marvin. "Barry is such a nice boy, but so quiet. He's trying to write a play. And Penny's a good sport. Plays good game of bridge, goes around a lot. They room together, though I shouldn't think they'd be a bit congenial. Men are odd that way. But then, so are women, too, at times. Now you two girls are such opposite types, yet you seem to be great friends. Always known each other, have you?"

So I had to sketch out for her how Inez and I met for the first time at Tamack Junction only two years ago, how we toured Minnesota as a waitress team, and how we had come to New York to look for an Uncle Nels, who seemed to be permanently lost in the discards.

"Isn't that interesting!" says Mrs. Marvin. "Why, Mr. Marvin makes Duluth every season on his Western trip. Building hardware is his line, you know, and he simply despises being on the road, because he has to be away from me so much. I get frightfully lonesome, too, but he hopes to be made Eastern sales manager next year and then we shall have a home of our own, a dear little apartment where I can cook dainty things when I feel like it, and entertain my friends. I'm horribly domestic, you know."

"Yes?" says I. I shouldn't have guessed it if she hadn't said so, but I tried not to look surprised.

Anyway, after a few more chats with Mrs. Marvin we almost felt as though we'd lived at Mrs. Welby's for years. The different people seemed a lot more like regular people to a few of 'em. Inez was especially taken with Mrs. Marvin. She's a prize listener, Inez, and while at first she'd sit with her ears and her lips shut, at last she got so she'd chatter away folksy, saying almost a dozen words during a half hour session.

And it must have been once when I wasn't present, about the time Inez was enjoying her one-day engagement as a movie actress, that she shattered all her speech records and confided in Mrs. Marvin the full details of her wonderful run of luck. I didn't guess it at the time, but it came out a little later.

To be exact, this was the third day of our big lot, after I'd convinced Inez that with a whole hundred dollars to her the good there was no need of our rushing frantic into some job that we wouldn't care for. It seemed to worry Inez to be without any regular work, even for a short time, but I persuaded her that the wheels of commerce would spin along just the same if we kept our hands off for a little while.

So on this particular evening we were lingering over the dessert, canned peaches and bakery jelly roll—and chatting with Mrs. Marvin, when Ruby comes in with the big announcement.

"Gentlemen to see Miss Petersen," says she. "He—he's her uncle."

"What makes you think he's her uncle?" "He say so," says Ruby. "He—he got whiskers?" demands Inez.

"Mustache," says Ruby. "Funny ol' gink. Tall hat, cane an' all." "The rich uncle at last!" says Mrs. Marvin, patting Inez on the shoulder. "Isn't that splendid!"

As usual, Inez is taking it calm, or seems to be. The real facts are, though, that as yet the idea has only begun to percolate down through the bony part.

"Uncle Nels!" asks Inez, turning to me. "That's the rumor," says I. "But if it is, he must have second sight or be mighty clever, with the Outfit board. How could he know you were here? Where have you parked him, Ruby?"

"Front parlor," says Ruby. "He gotta big box of candy."

excited, with most of the whites of her eyes showing.

"Just a moment," says I, excusing myself, and slips out to see what has worked her up to such a state.

And I find her holding back a slim, neat dressed, pink-cheeked old party with white hair and a red necktie.

"Well, Ruby," I whispers, "who's this?"

"He—he's Uncle Nels, too," stammers Ruby.

"What-a-a-!" I asks gaspy. "Another! Sure you haven't got it twisted? Here, let me talk to him. Who is it you're looking for, Mister?"

"For my dear niece, Inez Petersen," says he. "Can it be that this is the little girl I used to—"

"Back up," says I. "It can't be anything of the kind. I wouldn't make more than half of Inez. You're her Uncle Nels, are you?"

"I am," says he, "and I am most anxious to—"

"Naturally," I breaks in. "She'll be right down, too, and if you'll wait here for a minute I'll arrange for the reunion."

"Pardon me, Miss," says he, "but I was told that Inez Petersen—"

"That's right, too," says I. "How long have you been her uncle?"

"Why," says he, "I was—that is, I've been her uncle ever since she was born."

"That ought to qualify you for the part then," says I. "Anyway, it gets you on the waiting list. Step inside, please."

"Waiting list?" says he. "I—I don't understand."

"Oh, it's all right," says I. "The front parlor isn't crowded yet and Inez will be down to meet you presently. This way." And I shunted him in with the other old sport.

I had turned for a dash upstairs after Inez when Ruby lets in a fourth party, a spectacled young fellow with a college band around his straw hat, no vest, and a soft collar. He couldn't have been a day over 22.

"Now come, Buddy," says I. "Don't tell me you're Miss Petersen's uncle."

"Oh, most decidedly no," says he, almost blushing. "Nothing of the sort."

"Not even a cousin, eh?" says I. "Then what's the merry idea? Who and why?"

"Reporter," says he. "I understood that a Miss Petersen was to meet her long lost uncle here tonight and—"

"You're a grand little guesser," says I, "although how you do it is past me. Yes, this is the spot and the touching spectacle is to be pulled off right in here just as soon as I can—There, Ruby. See if that's another candidate."

It was. He's a round-faced, rather good-looking middle aged gent who holds a newspaper clipping in his hand.

"Pass him in with the others, Ruby," says I. "I've got to interview Inez and find out exactly how long on stray uncles she happens to be, for if there are many more we ought to rent a hall. Just line 'em up in there as they come."

And upstairs I burst in on Mrs. Marvin and Inez putting the finishing touches to an elaborate costume which made Inez look more than ever like a corn-fed goddess of liberty who had dropped the torch for the curling tongs.

"I can live up to my name," "Pardon me, Miss," says he, "but I was told that Inez Petersen—" two reporters, most of them are Inez's lost uncles."

"But I—I don't understand," says she.

"Neither do we," says I. "They began to come about an hour ago, and the supply hasn't given out. Begins to look like a convention, doesn't it?"

"But it—it's absurd," says Miss Welby. "Something must be done about it."

"Quita right," says I. "And as Inez seems to be suffering from shell shock, I suppose I'll have to be the goat. Let's all go down and have a look at the congregation."

I wasn't a bit cheered up, either, when we struck the lower hall, to see Ruby steering in a late arrival. He was a shabby little man with a long nose, and he, too, had a piece torn from a newspaper. That gave me my first hunch. I stopped in prompt and held out my hand.

"I'll take the clipping, please," says I.

"Oh, thanks," says he. "And may I see Miss Inez Peter—"

"Perhaps," says I. "Line's busy now. Push in and find a chair if you can."

"Why!" says Mrs. Marvin. "I saw Barry Platt in there. It may be that he can tell us something."

"Wait!" says I. "This looks like a clue."

And I hadn't read more than a few lines from the newspaper piece before, we all began to get an inkling—that is, all except Inez. The heading alone almost told the whole story. "Screen Favorite Searching For Rich Uncle." And then it went on to relate how the beautiful blonde movie star, Miss Inez Petersen, who had recently been engaged to a leading actor in the latest True Art production, had come all the way from her home in Duluth to hunt for a wealthy uncle who had disappeared from that city several years ago and was believed to be living in New York under an assumed name.

It's one of those human interest yarns, where plain facts are not allowed to interfere with any frills or fancy that might produce heart throbs. And at the end there's a paragraph which suggests that if Miss Petersen's Uncle Nels really is in town, he ought to drop in at such a number West 57th Street almost any evening soon and soothe the fears of an anxious heart.

"Huh!" says I. "So you're been telling some reporter the story of your life, have you, Inez?"

"Me?" says Inez. "I don't see any reporter. Never. I tell Mrs. Marvin, that's all."

"Oh!" says I, turning to the friendly lady. "Then it was you?"

"Why," says she, "I—I may have mentioned something of the kind to Barry Platt. But he's such a nice boy I didn't think he would—"

"Evidently he has," says I. "And he's some press agent, if you ask me. Of course, I don't doubt that he meant all right. He couldn't guess that New York was full of volunteer uncles for lovely movie actresses. I wouldn't have, either. But that seems to be the case. There are enough for a couple of jury panels, and this paper hasn't been on the street but a few hours."

"Just suppose, though," puts in Mrs. Marvin, "that one of them should be her real uncle who had read that story and come to find her?"

"Yes," says I. "There's that chance."

"How you find out?" demands Inez, who has been peering through the door.

"Whatever you do," says Miss Welby, "I trust you will not be long about it."

"I'll make it as snappy as I can, never fear," says I. "Now let's see; what's the acid test for a genuine uncle? Ah, I think I have it! Here, Inez, a word on the side with you. Yes, back here in the corner. And whisper the answer in my ear."

She did it. Then I borrowed a writing pad and some pencils from Miss Welby, took Inez by the hand, and marched into the front parlor.

"I suppose I should have been scared stiff, but I wasn't. As perhaps you have noticed, I don't get fussed very easily. I stood there with my chin out and asked the delegates in the back room to move up."

"Not me," says the shabby little man with the long nose. "I represent the Watchful Eye Detective Agency and I'd like a word with—"

"You're excused," says I. "Now for the here, gentlemen, is Miss Inez Petersen. She isn't a movie star any more. In fact, she had only a two days' trial at it and was fired. At present she has no job of any kind and a very low cash reserve. So you see she could use a rich uncle now—and he needn't be so scandalously rich at that."

There was a little shuffling of feet in the back rows about then, but I held up my hand. "Don't anybody leave yet," says I. "For Inez is anxious not to miss any real uncles that may happen to be present. True, she has only one Uncle Nels, so some of you must be trying to horn in. But I think we can sift out the genuine, dyed-in-the-wool article. Barry Platt, will you help untangle this mess you've got us into? Then pass around these slips of paper and borrow the tall gentlemen's silk hats. Are you all set? Everybody got his ball?"

It was the pink-cheeked old boy with the red necktie who started the parade, and after that they crowded on his heels as fast as if they were taking part in a fire drill and were not sure they didn't smell smoke. Inside of two minutes not a candidate was left, and the group of reporters were standing there wearing broad grins.

"Sorry, Buddies," says I, "but the Petersen family reunion seems to have been called off. Better luck next time."

But say, those fresh young bicks can't think up to put in the papers. I didn't mind what they said about my carrotty hair, or the freckles; but that part about my having Portia acting like a tongue-tied old maid who'd just had her tonsils out—that was almost personal.

"Not me," says the shabby little man with the long nose. "I represent the Watchful Eye Detective Agency and I'd like a word with—"

Inside of two minutes not a candidate was left, and the group of reporters were standing there wearing broad grins.

"Sorry, Buddies," says I, "but the Petersen family reunion seems to have been called off. Better luck next time."

But say, those fresh young bicks can't think up to put in the papers. I didn't mind what they said about my carrotty hair, or the freckles; but that part about my having Portia acting like a tongue-tied old maid who'd just had her tonsils out—that was almost personal.

"Not me," says the shabby little man with the long nose. "I represent the Watchful Eye Detective Agency and I'd like a word with—"

"You're excused," says I. "Now for the here, gentlemen, is Miss Inez Petersen. She isn't a movie star any more. In fact, she had only a two days' trial at it and was fired. At present she has no job of any kind and a very low cash reserve. So you see she could use a rich uncle now—and he needn't be so scandalously rich at that."

There was a little shuffling of feet in the back rows about then, but I held up my hand. "Don't anybody leave yet," says I. "For Inez is anxious not to miss any real uncles that may happen to be present. True, she has only one Uncle Nels, so some of you must be trying to horn in. But I think we can sift out the genuine, dyed-in-the-wool article. Barry Platt, will you help untangle this mess you've got us into? Then pass around these slips of paper and borrow the tall gentlemen's silk hats. Are you all set? Everybody got his ball?"

It was the pink-cheeked old boy with the red necktie who started the parade, and after that they crowded on his heels as fast as if they were taking part in a fire drill and were not sure they didn't smell smoke. Inside of two minutes not a candidate was left, and the group of reporters were standing there wearing broad grins.

"Sorry, Buddies," says I, "but the Petersen family reunion seems to have been called off. Better luck next time."

But say, those fresh young bicks can't think up to put in the papers. I didn't mind what they said about my carrotty hair, or the freckles; but that part about my having Portia acting like a tongue-tied old maid who'd just had her tonsils out—that was almost personal.

RAILROADERS BEAT SELBYS IN SLUG FEST, 10-7

Friday, July 8—Central Labor vs. Selby.
Saturday, July 9—Steel Plant vs. Selby.

In a game that was full of hitting, many runs, numerous errors and several, and divers climaxes, the N. & W. team of the Industrial League managed to defeat the Selby Arch Preservers at the Seventeenth Street grounds, last evening by the score of 10 to 7. That there was much hitting will be better appreciated when it is set down in cold type that the two teams made 22 hits good for a total of 44 bases. Such terrific slugging has not been seen on a local lot in many a day, and while the Railroaders excelled in the number of bases registered as a result of the terrific bombardment, the Selby clan outbatted them by the ratio of 12 to 10, and that is some little consolation for the losers. It is often the Arch Preservers break into the two figures in the 10 column but they did last evening at the expense of Mr. Waits and Mr. Hunter, the former quipped after he had lashed through 1-3 strenuous innings. The head did not get him so much as his runners around the base paths, and it will not be long until a flock of seagulls will be down this way looking him over. Whether school keeps or not, Mr. Connors is sure to be sporting a William around in his pockets, for he will be the recipient of that amount through the liberality of W. W. Bauer, the real estate fan. When Edna Kearns stepped to the plate, Timmy Yeager presented him with a five dollar bill for clubbing the 9th home run of the season—so it will be seen that Mr. Bauer is using some of that "three percent" to enrich the sluggers of the league. Can't say very much in praise of Umpire Yeager's bit of oratory. "Buck" will have to "keep" up a little, or there will be no chance for him breaking in that after dinner league, of which Chauncey Depew is past president.

Off Hughes started on the mound for the "Jubilee," but he lasted only two innings, during which time the Railroaders found him for four hits and as many runs. Then "Boss" Spence took up the burden and after he had no chance for him breaking in that after dinner league, of which Chauncey Depew is past president.

INDIANS BEATEN

CLEVELAND, July 8—Moore's effectiveness and brilliant fielding by Galloway, Dykes, J. Walker and Welch resulted in Cleveland losing the first game of the series with the league tail enders, 5 to 3. Moore was rather wild and his lack of control was responsible for the three runs scored by Cleveland. Long hits by Dykes, Witt and Galloway were factors in the scoring of the Athletics.

PACING RACE IS FEATURE
CLEVELAND, July 8—Single G. Hal Mahone, Red Lancelotti, Senador and Louis Graham, five of the great pacers in training, were named today to form the field to start in the free for all pace, the feature of today's grand circuit harness horse racing program at North Randall. Because of his recent good races on half mile tracks Single G. was expected to carry the bulk of the public's money. Three other pacers were on the card, including the second division of the 2:20 pace, the first division of which was decided yesterday. Ten probable starters were named in this event. Eleven were expected to take the word in the 2:20 trot and the final event of the week, the 2:14 pace, closed with eight entered.

CHICAGO, July 8—With four jurors accepted for the trial of the White Sox and alleged gamblers in connection with the 1919 baseball scandal, indications were today that the picking of the other eight men would be speeded up. Attorneys at first asserted it would take two weeks to secure a jury to try the case, owing to the wide publicity given the scandal. There were indications yesterday that the trial might go further back than 1919 baseball history, when Attorney Henry A. Berger for the defense asked prospective jurors if they knew members of the Detroit and White Sox teams who played in 1917. Mr. Berger estimated that the Sox and Detroit teams of 1917 might be called to show that faking was done at that time with the cognizance of the club management.

An argument among attorneys during the examination of prospective jurors in the trial as to whether the White Sox players were under contract to their club during the 1919 scandal series resulted in a number of humorous definitions of the word "contract." The defense told the veniremen the players were not under contract to the club during the series and the state objected.

ONE WAY OR ANOTHER

DEALING jauntily and loosely in monstrous figures, as has become much the wont nowadays, John J. Lentz, erstwhile a figure of power and influence in Ohio Democratic politics, proposes an easy and simple solution of the tax situation for all the world.

He has been fervidly expounding the idea to the tight little state of Connecticut, where it was received with gusto by the people and enthusiastically approved by governors, mayors and college professors.

It is nothing less, and happily, nothing more, than that the government remit to the nations to whom it loaned eleven billion dollars to help along the big war, the whole sum, on condition that they reduce their armament from fifty to seventy-five per cent—what he means, we opine, is reduce by fifty or seventy-five per cent, as there is no showing that it has been cut down from previous figures.

Lentz with unreserved generosity offers the suggestion to the free use of the Harding administration and waives all credit for it, with his blessing for its adoption.

The proposal has a good deal the sound of an indulgent mother offering her naughty boy a toy whistle to be good, instead of reserving a sound spanking. Still it may have some merit, our creditors, our late associates in making the world free, are determined to have us release their debts by hook or crook, sooner or later, and we might just as well get something from them as nothing.

And you see, if Lentz's scheme worked out per schedule we would get a good deal out of it. For about three-fourths of the taxes of our debtors and fifty percent of our own go to keeping up navies and standing armies and reducing that expense by from fifty to seventy-five percent wouldn't be so little.

How much better it would be, though, to practice some common sense, shave down armament and pay honest debts, thus promoting future peace in honor.

THINGS TO PONDER OVER

HAPPILY we have no copy of the new protective measure, introduced into congress, so there is good excuse for passing up any discussion of it in a time when there is too much wrangling and disorder of all sorts otherwise.

But one or two things carried by the telegraph in unusual brevity, are worth taking into the mind for calm self-study. In a general way the bill largely increases duties on importations, so largely, in fact, that it is estimated it will produce a revenue double that provided by the existing measure. That means, not indubitably, because it will be assorted a million times that "protecting" American products makes them cheaper, but of an absolute truth that the consumer will have to pay more, no matter whether it be a foreign or home article he buys. Still, not here is study of this suggestion, but the more significant matter of what comes in free.

For instance newspaper print is to be admitted without paying any duty. So are hides, lumber and raw sugar.

Just keep before you the question: Why should they be? They seem to be American products, that is produced here in America by American labor.

THANKS, GENERAL, THANKS

GRAND MARSHAL FOCH is not only the greatest commander of the ages, he is a most elegant gentleman and a rare judge of the quality of action.

Still keenly mindful of the part our gallant boys rendered in the war, he took occasion of the coming of the 4th of July to congratulate America upon the noble part she played therein and to give expression of the gratitude of himself and his people for the aid rendered their beloved France in her darkest hour of peril.

He goes into some detail in recounting what America did, but, after all sums it up in the one sentence, that it was the unparalleled genius of Americans for action that hastened the victory.

It is interesting and a source of pride that he discloses that America was fully one year ahead in accomplishing the utmost that was expected of her and that in every instance when she was called upon she did more than was asked or anticipated as possible. Pershing, in a great council of the war chiefs, held in 1917, was told that in order to end the war it was necessary for his government to have 100 divisions in France in 1919, it had that many therein before 1918 was half on the wane. When the Germans began their appalling May drive the Americans were besought to aid in holding a part of the line, they not only did that, but actually took up a sector and began a vital advance. But it was not alone by their fast arriving numbers and brave fighting that the Americans put such hope and courage in their allies, it was their capacity for doing all things in such a rapid and magnificent way. They supplied ammunition before all seeming possibility, built vast docks, erected wonderful depots and filled them with supplies and constructed transportation, as though by the waving of a magic wand. In all things they were admirable, incomparable. Theirs is the honor and glory of turning the tide in favor of right as against might.

New York is said to be the wettest place in the nation, and it was, July 4th, when tens of thousands of men sweated in marching as a protest against a permanent dry spell. The question arises, however, if New York be as wet as it boasts it is, how comes it its citizens are so "dead set" against prohibition? We have never heard heretofore of Gotham being unselfishly concerned in the provinces.

English Humor.

Somewhat Hard to Digest.
On Monday morning little Jennie observed the kitchen assistant putting the clothes on to boil preparatory to washing them. Running upstairs she exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, we're going to have boiled clothes for dinner!"

Patriotism And Lockjaw

By Frederic J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—State laws or a Federal law to prohibit the sale and use of toy pistols and giant firecrackers on the Fourth of July are being urged. These are toys which are responsible for the majority of the lockjaw cases in the United States.

Most of the cities have for some years restricted the sale of fireworks. Independence Day is more widely celebrated every year with only municipal fireworks handled by experts or with some entirely different kind of entertainment. As the cities had kept for some years more or less complete records of the numerous Fourth of July casualties, a Fourth without lockjaw deaths and children left without arms, eyes, or fingers, made a profound impression.

But except where special rulings obtain, people have gone on playing with explosives the same as ever. In rural and suburban districts records of accidents on this particular day are rarely kept. If figures were available, they would doubtless be nearly as alarming as those for the cities once were.

It is true that in remote farming regions fireworks are not especially popular. They are not always available. The danger zones are the villages and country side close to the cities where families from town flock to spend the Fourth on a picnic and to let the children shoot off firecrackers according to the time-honored custom.

Tetanus or lockjaw, seems too horrible a disease to befitting aftermath of a day of celebration. But wherever people play with Fourth of July noise-makers, cases of tetanus are always noted. Occasionally, tetanus develops from some other kind of injury. A scratch, cut or sore, made by any rusty or dirty implement, such as a nail or rake, is very apt to cause tetanus unless prompt treatment is given.

This disease is so deadly and the suffering caused by it is so intense that everyone should be familiar with its prevention and treatment, especially prevention. The first rule of prevention, judging by what we know as the prime cause of tetanus, should be "Don't use a toy pistol or shoot giant firecrackers."

Record of Accidents

The American Medical Association began in 1903 to collect statistics of Independent Day casualties, and in the 14 years following it recorded 1119 deaths from tetanus alone. Over 60 per cent of deaths were attributed to blank cartridge wounds.

Presuming a child does have a toy pistol, here is what may happen. The trigger may be a little stiff, and in discharging it the boy may have the skin rubbed off of a little place on his hand between the thumb and forefinger. Or, perhaps the pistol will backfire and make a slight abrasion on his hand. The injury may be slight, so slight that no notice is taken of it, or else home remedies are applied—a salve, peroxide, a drying powder, witch hazel—anything that is handy, regardless of its effect upon the injury.

There may be no complications. But if the injured place has in it enough of the virulent tetanus germs and the wound is not treated so as to destroy them, lockjaw will develop within the next two weeks.

Tetanus germs live mostly in the ground away from the air. Oxygen is fatal to them. Knowledge of this is the most important factor in treating tetanus. The germs seem to thrive in certain sections, perhaps in certain kinds of soil. Tests show that the ground in the vicinity of New York, for instance, is particularly rich in tetanus bacilli.

To contract the disease, enough of the germs must be transferred from the soil to an injury. It seems as if this would be a rare occurrence, and it is comparatively rare. Lockjaw is most frequently heard of in connection with battle wounds, and accidents out of doors where dirt is likely to infect the injury. This latter class includes Fourth of July accidents.

In the case of the toy pistol, the blank cartridge is made of powder, earth, and clay. The earth in the cartridge, however, does not need to enter the blood to make lockjaw possible. In fact, a number of cartridge tests were made and no signs of tetanus bacilli were found. The conclusion was that the danger was rarely in getting dirt from some outside source in the exposed flesh.

A boy's hands after he has been playing out doors and shooting firecrackers and toy pistols are necessarily dirty and a bit of grimy skin rubbed into a sore or scratch may hold enough germs to start the disease. The germ of lockjaw is one of the most resistant known. One thousand tetanus bacilli are enough to kill whereas one doctor estimates that it takes something like a billion ordinary pus germs to cause death.

How To Treat Wounds

If there is any possibility of dirty clothing or other grime having entered a wound it should be treated to prevent any tetanus bacilli from multiplying and spreading. The antitetanus serum should be administered and the wound should be kept open. To cauterize it so as to seal the surface and imprison the germs is to invite lockjaw. Any treatment that tends to heal the place over quickly is dangerous.

Air is fatal to the germs, whereas if they are shut off from the air they will quickly multiply and spread their poison throughout the system. Tetanus is one of the most insidious of maladies. Once the symptoms appear—the well-known stiffening of the jaws and other muscles—the patient has comparatively little chance of recovery. The toxin has spread through the nerves and the blood.

The anti-tetanus serum should be administered even then, if it has not been given before. The serum has saved some advanced cases, though it is largely effective as a preventive, and the sooner it is used the more chance there is of heading off the disease. Health officials keep on hand supplies of the serum and urge that it be used by doctors as a preventive treatment in all injuries where there is any danger of tetanus. There is no way of recording how many cases of lockjaw have been arrested by the serum, but that it has reduced the fatality of the disease to a great extent there is no doubt.

The suffering caused by lockjaw is the terrible feature of it. The patient is generally conscious even in the most acute spasms. The suffering is caused by contraction and stiffening of the muscles. Doctors say that in some cases the muscles of the back become so arched that only the head and feet of the patient touch the bed. Cases that reach so acute a stage as this seldom recover.

The deadliness of lockjaw is strikingly shown by the fact that some of the natives of the Congo rub their arrows for warfare in special places in the mud, where the germs abound. The result is as poisonous a dart as any known to savagery. Seldom does one of the arrows fail to carry enough tetanus to be deadly. When the germs enter the blood they sink deep into the victim the result is invariably a death of agony a few days later. This is the method of a savage tribe desirous of inflicting on its enemies the most terrible, lingering death it can devise.

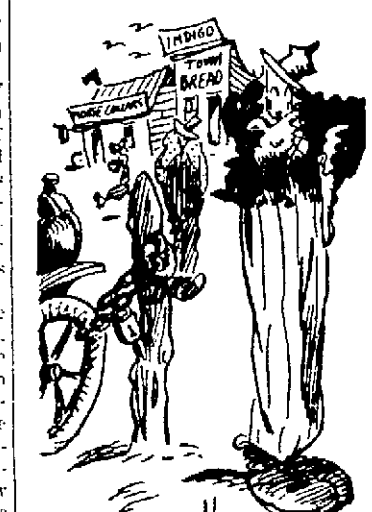

Expression Was Originally Job's

It is a long way to go to the days of Job for a "modern" expression! The phrase, "Escaping by the skin of the teeth," may be found in the 20th verse of the 19th chapter of the Book of Job: "My bone cleaveth to my skin and to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

To Talk Through Telephone

Scientific tests show that every additional inch of distance between the lips of the speaker and the mouthpiece of the telephone is equivalent to adding 120 miles of wire to the line over which one is talking. The proper distance is about one inch; if farther than that, such sounds as "b, p, d, t, f, z" are transmitted poorly. If closer than one-half inch, nasal sounds like "m" and "n" do not enter the transmitter properly.

Stanzas From Rabindranath Tagore
In translations made by him reproducing the meters of the originals.
(From The Measure)
Breezy April, vagrant April,
Lock me in your swing of music!
Thrill my branches with enchantment
Of your touch of sweet surprise;
In my idle dream by wayside
You come startling me from slumber,
Willful in your mood fantastic
Tense me with inconstant courting.

Breezy April, vagrant April,
I live with my lonesome shadows.
I know all your stilted fancies,
Language of your fitting footsteps;
All my secrets burst in blossoms
At your passing breath of whisper.
And my new leaves break in tumult
Of abandonment of kisses!
Oh, my lover, come, in reckless splendor,
Hurt the air with shock of your arrival;
No more secret meetings in uncertain
Glimpses of twilight, let your burning
Fling through midnight their tumultuous laughter.
Grasp me by my right hand, let all sleepers
Wake and come and see me glad and helpless.
Held in might of your majestic silence.

A Real Sprayer

A woman was riding down town on the Sixth avenue "L" in New York, which boasts of many surprising twists and turns.

At Eighth street a well-dressed, smiling pair of colored folks boarded the train and entered the car in which the woman was seated. Unoccupied seats were scarce and a sudden angle in the road just then made walking the deck on a stormy night seem a simple feat by comparison.

The feminine half of the couple finally gained her seat, after falling against one man, striking the newspaper of a second and dragging a fur skirt across the knees of a third. Her escort, having secured a seat across the aisle, looked across at her and laughed as he said: "Say, honey, what you all think this is, anyhow, spreading yourself all over everybody like that? Does you think you's confetti?"

Correct In His View

Clurley Smith, who used to umpire on the Kearney section, was summoned as witness at an inquest. He had been cautioned that he must be very exact in his statements.

After duly pondering the question, he replied: "He was what I should call a partial stranger."

"Either you knew him or you did not," said the coroner sternly. "There is no such thing as a partial stranger."

"Well," he answered, "I don't know how else to describe him. He was a one-legged man."

Q. How far can any one see from the highest point in New York City?
N. X. B.

A. On clear days, an observer at the top of the Woolworth building will have a view of land and water for 25 miles in every direction. The area visible has a population of 9,500,000.

Q. What is the insignia of the Militia Bureau?
L. W. K.

A. Insignia for the Militia Bureau has been approved by the War Department. It consists of two crossed crossed and superimposed on an eagle with wings outspread. It will be worn by all officers and enlisted men detailed in or under the jurisdiction of the Militia Bureau, which also applies to instructors of the National Guard.

Q. What is a man called who studies crop production?
E. C. P.

A. All farmers study crop production, but a man who specializes in the branch of agriculture that deals with theory and practice of crop production is called an agronomist.

Q. Is wood cut in the winter time more durable?
M. F. T.

A. The Forest Products Laboratory says that the time of cutting wood has very little effect upon its durability if the timber is properly cared for afterward. Late fall or winter cutting is simplest as the wood season more slowly and with less checking, and by warm weather is seasoned enough to be less susceptible to borers and fungi. There is, however, practically no difference in moisture content of green wood in winter and summer.

Q. What accounts for yellow stains appearing on clothes when being ironed. I am sure they are not iron rust stains.
J. R. H.

A. When a material has not been rinsed sufficiently and is ironed with steam still in the fabric, yellow stains sometimes appear. Ordinary laundering often removes them, and bleaching in the sun will help if the stain is persistent. This condition may be avoided by thorough rinsing of clothes.

Q. What makes children bowlegged?
E. H. L.

A. This condition is due to allowing a child to walk too early, or to rickets, or rarely, to muscular contraction before the child is put on his feet.

Q. Upon which finger does a man wear a wedding ring, when the double ring ceremony is used?
D. D. D.

A. A man wears a wedding ring as a woman does, on the finger next to the little finger of the left hand.

Q. How large must a piece of ice be to weigh 50 pounds?
R. C.

A. In order to weigh 50 pounds a piece of ice should contain about 1510 cubic inches.

Q. Does the King of England have to belong to the Episcopal Church?
E. G.

A. It is required that the ruler of England be a member of the Church of England, which is Episcopal.

Q. How can I raise angle worms?
S. A.

A. The Bureau of Fisheries says angle worms may be raised by placing a number of the worms in a large wooden box filled with leamy soil that is kept quite moist, but not wet. This box should be kept in a dark corner in the cellar.

Q. Does it take the temper out of a razor to stick it in boiling water?
S. B. S.

A. The Bureau of Standards says placing a razor in boiling water does not take the temper out.

The Credit World

"I say, sir, if you don't mind, I'd like to be paid for that job of turning and refinishing your overcoat," the tailor suggested.

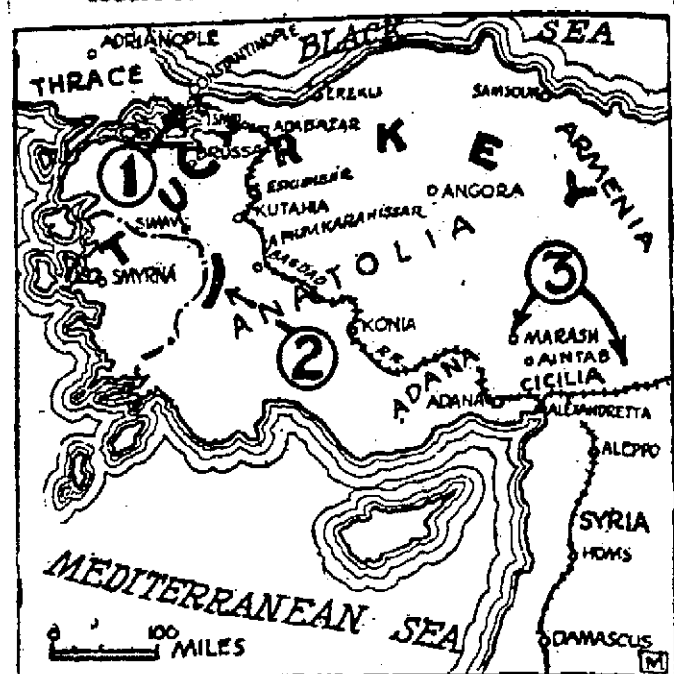

"Pay you for making that coat over?" the man who had stopped in to get his trousers pressed exclaimed in surprise. "Why, man, it isn't your turn. I haven't yet paid the chap I got it from, and he still owes the tailor who made the coat in the first place."

ATROCITIES GROW IN NEAR EAST

Figures indicate main points in news dispatches.

1.—Reports from Turkey say that the near east relief work is being handicapped by the pro-Armenian attitude in some quarters. The Turks, it is said, do not commit more atrocities than other nationals, nor are the Armenians in worse economic condition than many of their neighbors. The Turks claim they are made to appear in their worst light because of biased reports. It is stated that the attitude of the part of the near east relief committee indicates the Turks to further atrocities against the Armenians and weakens American prestige in Turkey.

2.—The Turks report that the Greeks have been guilty of numerous atrocities in the course of their military campaign on the Smyrna front.

3.—It is also reported that the French plan to utilize Armenians on the Cilician front, where a Franco-Turkish war is on, has failed. One report has it that the Armenians committed such atrocities upon the Turks that fell into their power that they were disarmed by the French authorities. The French are said to have been responsible for many of the massacres in the Marash and Aintab regions, where Francophile Armenians inflamed the Turks to retaliate.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

A Story of Napoleon

The death of Charles J. Bonaparte, a grand-nephew of Napoleon, at his home in Baltimore, after long life, recalls some history. Mr. Bonaparte was a grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, who married a beautiful Baltimore woman, and as a lawyer of distinction served President Roosevelt as attorney-general of the United States.

Napoleon I when at military school in France, was a fellow-student of Lieut. Francis D'Habecourt, to whom he became attached. Both were ambitious, and when in the late 1780's the Sicilian land speculators, aided by Joel Barlow, filled France with gorgeous visions of a heaven on earth in the Ohio Valley, Napoleon and D'Habecourt conceived a project for coming to America to found an empire. The colonial enterprise which resulted in the settlement at Gallipoli, Ohio, in 1790, two years after the formal opening of the Northwest Territory at Marietta by soldiers of the Revolution and distinguished New Englanders, afforded the opportunity for adventure in the New World. The two decided to come, but Napoleon's family persuaded the Little Corporal to remain in Europe. Lieut. D'Habecourt did come, not to win military glory, but as it happened, to become the first postmaster at Gallipoli.

The spirit of America, devoted to liberty and freedom, soon quenched his despotic longings. He lived and died peacefully at Gallipoli while Napoleon bathed Europe in blood and rose to extraordinary fame. Who can imagine the history of France and Europe as it might have been had Napoleon accompanied the French Five Hundred on their journey to the Ohio Valley and been absorbed in pioneer life?

It is not a partisan impulse that is behind the general discontent which now finds expression all over the country regarding Congress. The people are displeased with the increasing heedlessness of the body which should help instead of hindering a revival of business.

It is developing into one of the hottest summers on record—a weather condition that calls for moderation in eating, avoidance of excessive effort, and a stiff bit on one's feet. Regular rest will help out and relieve the strain.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Thoughts while strolling around New York: A British club steps. Clipped accents from Piccadilly and talkative tweeds. There goes a beautiful movie queen, who bites her nails to the quick. Wise talking Mandarinese with their leads together. Trying to conquer new worlds without toil. A foreign street musician grinding out "Over There."

Gracious ladies fanning themselves in open carriages. Hard boiled vaudeville in soft-boiled collars. Orange juice—the national drink. I wonder what would happen to me if I went back home wearing a waxed moustache. Certainly a lot of cute ones along the Rialto. All stage door-keepers chew midnight cigars.

Crowds watching the city water wagons. And well all seem have to get aboard. Broadway motor sign: "Dangerous Curve Ahead!" How pathetic. The flappers now imitate the thrifty roles of Ethel Barrymore. What has become of the old-fashioned baby-talk? Private policemen in blue denim uniforms.

If I got home late tonight I'll tell my wife I was watching the comet. Brown decked men with square-topped shoes watching the out-of-town news paper stands. They pick up many wandering criminals there. A large counter-sale of Oscar Wilde books. Charming Pollock always carries a manuscript case.

A huge store selling only shaving materials. The age of specialization indeed. The first horse drawn wagon I've seen in weeks. A few long skirts, but no many. I wonder what a corset salesman thinks about these days. Here is the house where the society ladies fought for the love of a clowny girl and the next morning she married a stage carpenter.

Lights atinkle in Broadway's hanging garden. The cafeterias are crowded. People still eat anyway. White tams with red cherries dropping over little ears. That girl had a nasty laugh. And the fellow looks contented. A Chinatown bus filled with a group of corn-fed girls. They will find just as much excitement meeting a train back home.

This is not the observation of a psychologist but of a man in Wall Street, who has weathered many storms. He said that in all his experience with financial depressions he had found the only true barometer was the thoughts of the people. "It is a simple analysis," he said. "When people begin to think things are going to get better, they do get better. I don't know the reason nor do I care, but I know it is true."

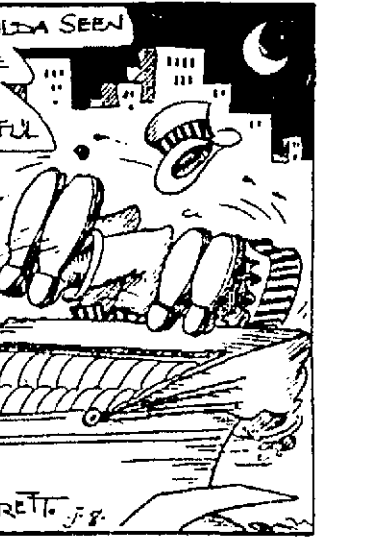

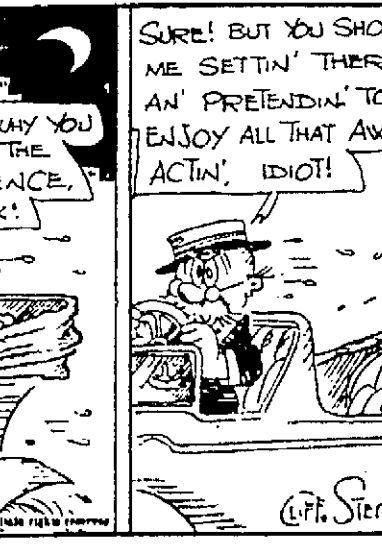

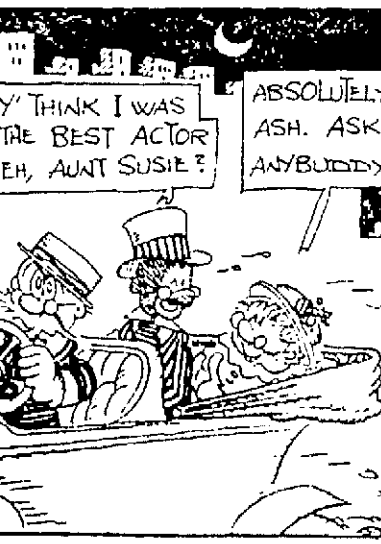

Some people are so tactless. A magazine writer friend of mine sends me a post-card inscribed: "I have been thinking of you today." On the reverse side is a picture of the state penitentiary.

At Hogarty's where the circus people dine when they are "at liberty," a well-known performer was entertaining the other evening. At an adjoining table some rival performers were dining. Hogarty's is the kind of place where people speak right out.

An argument started. The hostess who was entertaining thought some slighting remarks at the other table were intended for her. She expressed herself forcibly. A woman got up to pacify her.

"Don't lose your temper," she said. "Me lose my temper," replied the hostess. "I laugh—Ha Ha. Why get I've been with a circus twenty years and never lost a spangle."
